How The Tiger Got Its Stripes?
• Why Does The Tiger And Stag Fear Each Other

Future Ace Publishing

Originally, the tiger did not have stripes. Due to greed, the tiger had ropes tied to its body. The ropes were burned and left marks on the tiger's hide as black stripes.

The stag and the tiger agreed to stay together. Both were suspicious of one another. When they were rattled by some noise, each scuttled out of the house in fear of one another.

A-Tale-A-Week Collection
52 Fables

This wonderful book contains 52 clever tales of animals and people, providing children with a fable a week for one whole year of reading enjoyment. The fables are based on the original stories from Aesop, and they have been carefully edited in simple language for young children who are building confidence in reading.

Each story offers words of wisdom that are summarized in a short, simple sentence at the end of the story. Children will be able to identify the good and the bad characters, the wise and the foolish, the weak and the strong, and learn other useful lessons with regards to interacting with others in everyday life.

Lively, colourful illustrations give visual cues about story events and characters, thus enhancing the children's understanding of the stories and adding to their reading pleasure. It is an excellent book for a child's first library.
